I've become a rustic garden project maniac, building trellises and plant stands.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Inspired Me!By Susie OThis is a terrific book. The author, Dawn King, shows you the tools and techniques to use in clear, easy to understand instructions with great photos and drawings. She is a great teacher and walks you through each project step by step. Along the way she encourages you to try your own thing. I've always been intimidated by woodworking but with the guidance of this manual I bought a great set of tools and I'm on my way to my first completed project. And I love the projects in the book. Every single one is a winner you'll want in your own garden. Thanks Dawn! 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. This is going to be fun! I have read this book through and it looks like it's going to be great for using up all the fallen trees in my yard. The directions are not particularly detailed because the branches you use will vary but it will get you building furniture. Start collecting branches now if you are ordering this book. You won't need many tools but you will need LOTS of branches.

This book features all-new projects aimed at the hottest trend in garden and yard decoration-rustic structures and accents made from green wood, soldered copper, weathered wood, rough cedar, unfinished iron, and other common materials. Rustic ornaments and structures now dominate most upscale landscape centers and arboretums-some structures sell for hundreds of dollars, using materials that can be acquired for a few dollars. Given the expense of these pieces of yard art, the cost savings offered by doing it yourself are enormous. The book opens with an idea section demonstrating how rustic structures and accents can transform the look of a landscape. This is followed by a section showing where to find green wood and other materials, and how to work with them. The heart of the book is 20 plans and step-by-step directions for a wide range of projects. Projects include: rustic bird houses and wildlife feeders made from weathered cedar; arbors and trellises made from rough willow branches; a garden bench made from bark-on branches shaped by an ax; a garden obelisk made from soldered copper allowed to weather; woven-twig garden edging. The projects are remarkably easy to build, and most can be completed in a single weekend.

About the Author Dawn King has taught the art of creating bark-on garden art pieces to hundreds of people at the McLaughlin Woodworking Museum in Kingston, Ontario, and her work has been featured in magazines.
