Although the photographs are excellent, the rooms have been covered, in greater depth, in her TV series and, therefore, the book is merely a portfolio of her past work.22 of 23 people found the following review helpful. very disappointedBy namaste nanI love Sarah's show on HGTV and expected really great book. Many of the photos were of projects she had done on her show. Was expecting so much more from Sarah.7 of 7 people found the following review helpful. Disappointing...By Rebecca Ann DexterSo disappointed! The book is just a collection of some of her television shows...and not her best. There is absolutely nothing on her cottage or farmhouse which I think reflects her best work...and there is absolutely nothing that you haven't seen before. I love her show and hate that HGTV is so slow in getting it to the US but this book fell way short of what I expected.

About the Author Sarah Richardson is a designer and television personality who started her career as a prop stylist in 1995. She is the host and co-producer of HGTV's Sarah's House, Sarah 101, Room Service, Design Inc., and Real Potential, design shows that air in more than 100 countries around the world. In 2014, Sarah became the home design director at Good Housekeeping. Excerpt. Reprinted by permission. Open the door, cross the threshold, and the first room you encounter sets the tone for what to expect in the rest of the house. Whether your style is formal or casual, contemporary or traditional, the scene is set as soon as the door swings open. Yet these front of house areas are often overlooked and considered merely a transition zone to more important and grander areas. Forget the fact that you don't lounge, eat, entertain, or sleep in your entrance and embrace your ability to create a first impression that speaks volumes about the design direction of your home.
