1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. would make a fine gift to a friend or to oneselfBy GwenFrom her home on Dataw Island, South Carolina, Sandra Fischer has written a year's journal of prose and poetry to be read and shared. This book, filled with scripture and quotes from literature, would make a fine gift to a friend or to oneself! Noting that our lives parallel the seasons of the earth, the author writes about the splendor and riches to be found in nature and in our lives, if we only look for them. Original photographs and artwork beautifully illustrate the text.0 of 0

Get one for yourself and share one with a friend.

Ever since the first garden appeared on earth and seasons were set in place, human kind has been subject to, as well as inspired by, the changes taking place in nature and in people. In spring new life appears, followed by summers flowering, falls fruition and finally winters rest. The seasons of both nature and humans possess many parallels as found in the authors reflections in Seasons in the Garden. Through prose and poetry, scripture verses and illustrations, the reader can journey through the seasons and contemplate the likenesses found within nature and humanity.
